

Testing Details

I mainly tested the user authentication side of the program. I would see how the program behaved when signed in versus when signed out. I would sign in and try to go to pages that would not be available such as the account page by trying to type in a direct URL. I would then record the errors that would arise. I was mainly checking the difference in navigation between our signed in users versus our unsigned in users. I was also ensuring that user authentication was working properly by running isolated bits of code that called on user authentication such as profile updating so that any errors with user authentication would arise.

I referenced this screen flow chart when testing.
